The History Teacher publishes articles of three general types: (1) reports on promising new classroom techniques, educational programs, curricula, and methods of evaluating instructional effectiveness; (2) analyses of important interpretations, leading historians, historiographical problems, and recent

Cover: Pocahontas statue, photographed in 2003. “Pocahontas” greets visitors alongside the rural highway road in the town of Pocahontas in Pocahontas County, Iowa; the tepee structure has since been removed. Pocahontas has been reimagined for various uses in numerous historic and artistic interpretations, from fine art, to folk art, to film, and, of course, to history textbooks. Dominique Padurano uses a variety of images to teach students about visual source analysis, critical thinking, the creation of history, and more in the article, “‘Isn’t That a Dude?’: Using Images to Teach Gender and Ethnic Diversity in the U.S. History Classroom—Pocahontas: A Case Study,” which begins on page 191 of this issue.

trends in specific fields of historical research; and (3) critical review essays on audiovisual materials, textbooks, and other secondary works suitable for classroom use. Briefer items announcing conferences or workshops for history teachers, other teaching-related special events, speakers, and the like, appear in the Society for History Education’s website, <www.thehistoryteacher.org>.

The History Teacher also publishes, as regular departments, reviews of audiovisual materials, textbooks, supplementary readers, and other printed classroom materials, with evaluations of their scholarly reliability, formats, and effectiveness of presentation. Reviews are commissioned in advance. Readers interested in contributing reviews should advise the Editor of their qualifications and fields of specialization.

The History Teacher does not have its own style sheet. Contributors should follow the forms of citation customary in the historical profession. Manuscripts must be double spaced (including all quotations and endnotes), and submitted in triplicate. The manuscripts should be in letter quality type. Authors are encouraged to supply or recommend illustrations that would enhance the effectiveness of their work in print. Final decisions on manuscripts usually require a minimum of 10-15 weeks. We cannot return articles which have not been accepted unless a self-addressed, stamped envelope was enclosed with the article. The editors, who are the final judges of matters concerning grammar, usage, and other conventions, will edit contributions to conform to the normal manner of presentation in The History Teacher.

Manuscripts prepared on electronic word processing devices can dramatically improve the speed and accuracy of text handling. The History Teacher can accept many popular word processing formats. Contributors should indicate at the time of first (hard copy) submission if their manuscripts are available in electronic form, identifying the word processing programs and the types of machine upon which the manuscripts were prepared. Upon acceptance, contributors will be informed if the manuscripts can be received in electronic form by The History Teacher.

Correspondence regarding contributions to The History Teacher and materials for review should be sent to the Editor, The History Teacher, California State University, Long Beach, 1250 Bellflower Boulevard, Long Beach, CA 90840-1601.

The Society for History Education affirms that it does not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, national origin, age, or sex. Inquiries concerning the application of Title IX and other federal and state statutes may be referred to the Affirmative Action Officer, California State University, Long Beach, 1250 Bellflower Boulevard, Long Beach, CA 90840.

The History Teacher is abstracted or indexed in Historical Abstracts, America: History and Life, Current Index to Journals in Education, and Multi-Media Index.

Rida Blaik-Hourani graduated from the University of Melbourne. She holds a Ph.D. in Artistic and Creative Education. Currently, she is an Assistant Professor at the Emirates College for Advanced Education, teaching at the Post Graduate Diploma of Education and Bachelor of Education levels. She has been involved in several researches that embody curriculum studies and sociology of education.

Jason Eden earned his Ph.D. in History from the University of Minnesota. He is currently an Assistant Professor of History at Saint Cloud State University, in Minnesota, where he teaches courses dealing with early America, historical methods, the racial history of the United States. His research interests include Atlantic World History, Religious History, and Native American Studies. He has presented papers and published articles dealing with gender, age norms, and religious culture in colonial Massachusetts.

Daniella K. Garran was born and raised in Baltimore, Maryland. After receiving her B.A. in History and Art History from Connecticut College, she went on to obtain her M.A. in Education from Tufts University, where she became passionate about writing and implementing curriculum. Daniella has been teaching seventh grade social studies and seminars at the Cape Cod Lighthouse Charter School since 2003. She especially enjoys teaching about ancient Greece.

Matthew T. Herbst is Director of the University of California, San Diego's Making of the Modern World Program, which provides a global perspective on the past, from antiquity to the present, to all Eleanor Roosevelt College undergraduates. Dedicated to internationalizing the undergraduate experience, he has designed programs in Europe (Paris and Istanbul) and Southeast Asia (Bangkok) and recruited faculty for other locations. He received his Ph.D. and M.A. in History from the University of Michigan and his B.A. from Binghamton University.

Patricia Juarez-Dappe is an Associate Professor of History at California State University, Northridge. She received her Ph.D. in History from the University of California, Los Angeles in 2002. She is the author of When Sugar Ruled: Economy and Society in Northwestern Argentina, Tucumán, 1876-1916. She was appointed Teaching Fellow for the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences in 2008-2009.

Steven Kite received his Ph.D. from Oklahoma State University in 2003. His research focuses on public history, rural political movements, and labor history. He has taught at Oklahoma State University, the University of Central Oklahoma, Fort Hays State University, and currently teaches at the University of Arkansas at Fort Smith.

Jacob Kramer has a Ph.D. in History from the Graduate Center of the City University of New York. He is currently an Assistant Professor of History at Borough of Manhattan Community College. In the 2005-2006 academic year, he was a writing fellow at Queens College, and has previously written for The History Teacher, Reviews in American History, and History News Network.

Barbara Ormond is a Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Education at the University of Auckland, in the disciplines of History, Social Sciences, and Art History Education, preparing students to teach in secondary schools. Ormond taught and held Senior Management roles at Selwyn College in Auckland for eighteen years. In addition to being involved in various national assessment, moderator, and curriculum initiatives, Ormond published The Iconography of Visual Culture and Pedagogical Approaches to Seeing—Illustrated Prints Pertaining to Religious Issues in Early Modern England in 2008.

Dominique Padurano received her Ph.D. from Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, in 2007, M.S.Ed. from Dowling College in 1998, and A.B. magna cum laude from Harvard College in 1993. A teacher at Horace Mann School in New York City, Padurano is currently writing a biography of fitness icon Charles Atlas. Tentatively titled Making American Men: The Life and Times of Charles Atlas, her work uses the career of this Italian immigrant as a way to understand Americans' changing conceptions of gender, sexuality, childhood, and ethnicity during the first half of the twentieth century.

Kim Perez received her Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma in 2006. Her research interests include the history of nature study and science education, women's participation in science, and public history. She developed an interest in local history after accepting a position at Fort Hays State University and learning more about the rich history of the local region.

Brent J. Ruswick earned his Ph.D. in the history of science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and has an undergraduate degree in secondary education from the University of Nebraska-Omaha. His forthcoming book with Indiana University Press is Almost Worthy: The Poor, the Paupers, and the Science of Charity in America, 1877-1917. Presently, he is a Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of Central Arkansas, where he also supervises secondary education social studies student teachers.
