

The Women's Army Auxiliary Corps: A Compromise to Overcome the Conflict of Women Serving in the Army

Yashila Permeswaran

Le Mars Community Middle School, Le Mars, Iowa

Junior Division Historical Paper, National History Day 2008 Competition

“IT WASN'T JUST MY BROTHER'S COUNTRY, or my husband's country; it was my country as well. And so this war wasn't just their war; it was my war, and I needed to serve in it.”<sup>1</sup> This sentiment, shared by Beatrice Hood Stroup, expresses the feelings of hundreds of thousands of women who helped save the world from tyranny in World War II. Though we now take the idea of women in the military for granted, in the 1940s it was a vigorously debated suggestion. Men protected their country; women stayed at home. Because of conflict over whether women should serve in the army, Congress compromised by creating the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC), whose impact still resonates today.

The notion of women in the military has been controversial throughout history. Those who did fight were so rare they have become famous: Deborah, Joan of Arc, Molly Pitcher. As America moved closer to entering a second world war, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers from Massachusetts realized that women could play a vital role in the war effort. Women in other countries had already assumed jobs in factories, the air service, and air raid protection agencies; some European governments had even begun drafting women to participate in “almost every war activity except the actual combat.”<sup>2</sup>

However, Rogers wanted to avoid a situation in which women did not receive equal pay, medical care, benefits, food, or lodging, as had happened to volunteers during World War I. She “was determined that if women were to serve again with the Army in a wartime theater, they would receive the same legal protection and benefits as their male counterparts.”<sup>3</sup> To ensure these rights, Rogers introduced a bill in May of 1941 to create a Women's Army Corps (WAC). Her suggestion was met with a great deal of resistance.<sup>4</sup>

Many people in America didn't want women to work in, with, or near the army. One group that strongly opposed the idea was the Catholic Church. In June of 1942, the National Catholic Women's Union called the service of women in the military “a serious menace to the home and foundation of a true Christian and democratic country.”<sup>5</sup> Other Catholics were concerned about “submitting innocent and impressionable [girls] to the environment and temptations of the Army.”<sup>6</sup> The 1942 National Catholic Welfare Conference expressed its major concern, that the government would “use the war as an excuse for assuming control of children.”<sup>7</sup>

However, it wasn’t just Catholics who were gravely troubled by the idea of women serving in the Army. Many men worried that their status in the household would change drastically if women could help fight a war:

Opponents characterized the female soldier as a dire threat to the home and family, and to the privatized gender relationships within them, especially to the husband’s status as breadwinner and head of household. . . . The female soldier epitomized the wartime antiheroine, a figure whose potential . . . independence from men subverted the “natural order” and whose position as a female protector usurped men’s status and power, both within and outside of the home.<sup>8</sup>

Obviously, if men objected to their girlfriends, wives, and daughters enlisting, the women would feel great conflict about joining the military.

Another group against women serving in the army was the army itself, or at least some members of it. According to a woman who served as a USO Club hostess, “the feeling of men in the camps was 99 percent against women going into the Army.”<sup>9</sup> Some personnel expressed concern that men would not be able to function properly fighting alongside women: “The possibility that male soldiers might seek to defend and protect military women instead of carrying out their assigned missions [was] cited by military experts as a primary example of potential ‘dangers’ in incorporating women fully into the military structure.”<sup>10</sup>

Some officers seemed to think including females in the army was just a waste of time: Colonel Adler, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, suggested that they “concentrate their energies first on the tremendously important matter of building up the morale, in which, he declared, women were far more important and effective than men.”<sup>11</sup> Colonel McCoskrie, who would later serve as the commandant of the WAAC Training Center at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, was openly skeptical: “Like most of my contemporaries, I wasn’t much impressed by the thought of women in uniform. We had a war to fight, and war was man’s business. Women would only clutter it up.”<sup>12</sup>

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe, was “violently against” the idea of WAC at first and predicted “tremendous difficulties” in their service.<sup>13</sup> Even though Representative Rogers wanted the women’s corps to be a part of the Army so that women could be given equal pay, pension, and disability benefits, the “War Department was very unwilling to have these women as a part of the Army.”<sup>14</sup>

Women were split on the issue. Some women’s groups expressed opposition to the idea by writing to Rogers.<sup>15</sup> Others thought submitting to army discipline would be ridiculous when they could just volunteer.<sup>16</sup> However, many women were quite enthusiastic about the chance to serve their country. At the New York Convention for the League of Business and Professional Women, one woman said, “I want to do anything in my power to assist my country, and I know that there are great numbers of women who are of the same mind.”<sup>17</sup>

With all this conflict, it's not surprising that Congressional leaders tried to avoid the topic altogether. When Rogers first introduced the WAC bill in May of 1941, "it was tossed aside."<sup>18</sup> Many senators believed that it was inconsequential: "Congressional feeling, particularly in the Military Affairs Committee, [was] that women [had] enough to do... and, moreover, that the Rogers bill [could] wait until more important matters [were] decided."<sup>19</sup> According to Colonel Barbara Wilson, Congressmen did everything they could to evade the issue: "The politicians... made flimsy promises of considering [a women's corps] of sorts while quietly hoping it would all go away and secretly trying to figure out how to stop it."<sup>20</sup> Because of the conflict, the WAC bill faced a "dubious future."<sup>21</sup> All this changed, however, on December 7, 1941.

After the attack on Pearl Harbor, War Department officials began to realize that women would indeed be needed to win the war. Army leaders decided to work with Rogers to come up with a group that "would constitute the least threat to the Army's existing culture."<sup>22</sup> They compromised by creating the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC), a group which, according to Public Law 554, was formed "for the purpose of making available to the national defense the knowledge, skill, and special training of the women of the nation."<sup>23</sup> The corps would be a "separate, supplementary, parallel adjunct of the military establishment."<sup>24</sup> Rogers introduced the compromise WAAC bill at the end of December to the House Military Affairs Committee, this time with the full support of Secretary of War Henry Stimson and Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall.<sup>25</sup>

Despite the compromise, however, conflict still existed, especially in Congress. Although most of the opposition came from the South,<sup>26</sup> Congressman Somers of New York was also vehemently opposed to the idea, as can be seen by his comments from the March 17, 1942, Congressional Record:

I take this opportunity to express my definite and sincere opposition to what I consider the silliest piece of legislation that has ever come before my notice in the years I have served here. A woman's army to defend the United States of America. Think of the humiliation. What has become of the manhood of America, that we have to call on our women to do what has ever been the duty of men? The thing is so revolting to me, to my sense of Americanism, to my sense of decency, that I just cannot discuss it in a vein that I think legislation should be discussed on the floor of this House.<sup>27</sup>

Congressman Randolph called passing the WAAC bill a "grave mistake"<sup>28</sup> which was "not the manner in which we as men can show our deep respect"<sup>29</sup> for women. Representative Hare described it as a poor "reflection upon the courageous manhood of the country,"<sup>30</sup> while Congressman Fulmer called it the "most ridiculous bill"<sup>31</sup> he had considered in his twenty-one years in the House. One representative even asked, "Who will do the cooking, the washing, the mending, the humble homey tasks to which every woman has devoted herself; who will nurture the children?"<sup>32</sup>

Congressman Hook suggested using men who could not go to combat because of injury or physical defect: "Let us exhaust the manpower first before we try to make a women's auxiliary corps.... Let us give these young men... an opportunity to have an honorable discharge from the United States Army."<sup>33</sup> In the same vein,

Representative Hare proposed bringing back World War I veterans instead of using women; he was sure they “would like to demonstrate again their patriotism... and they would be just as efficient as anyone.”<sup>34</sup>

Despite the arguments against WAAC, most reasonable people realized that women would eventually become vital to the war effort. The size of the war machine necessary to fight the Axis on so many fronts would be enormous; military experts agreed that the United States would face a serious shortage in manpower before the end of the war.<sup>35</sup> This idea is stated somberly in a WAAC manual printed in 1943:

Our far-flung battlefield is already requiring millions of fighting men. That many of these gallant soldiers will lose their lives is inevitable. America must stand ready to replace these men with other men. There must be no limit to fighting manpower. Here arises the need for the Women’s Army Auxiliary Corps—these women will replace men for the fighting front.... It is said that battles are lost by failing to have enough men and enough weapon power at the right place at the right time.... American women do not intend to let our nation lose.<sup>36</sup>

Rep. Charles A. Plumley from Vermont summed up the point simply: “You cannot win this war without women.”<sup>37</sup>

In the end, the two most important opinions on the topic came from Chief of Staff Marshall and Secretary of War Stimson. Marshall wrote Congress, arguing for the bill’s passing: “All of our available manpower and womanpower will be required to win this war.”<sup>38</sup> Stimson agreed, adding that speed was vital: “In order that a maximum benefit might be obtained from the proposed auxiliary corps, it is essential that its organization and employment be carefully planned and key personnel properly trained before there is urgent need for extensive expansion.”<sup>39</sup>

Finally, in the spring of 1942, after “a long and acrimonious debate,”<sup>40</sup> the WAAC bill worked its way through Congress. It passed the House 249 to 86 on March 17; the vote in the Senate was much closer, ending 38 to 27 on May 12.<sup>41</sup> After President Roosevelt signed the compromise bill into law on May 15, over 13,000 women applied for the first 440 officer slots.<sup>42</sup> On July 15, 1942, the initial WAAC officer class started an eight-week course at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.<sup>43</sup> (See Appendix A.)

In the beginning, the women were considered a novelty and a joke. Multiple magazine articles referred to them as “skirted soldiers”<sup>44</sup> and discussed frivolous items such as the “silly hats” worn by leader Oveta Culp Hobby.<sup>45</sup> (See Appendix B.) Not taking the women seriously, “during the first few weeks of WAAC training, cartoonists and wise-cracking columnists had a field day.”<sup>46</sup>

However, the impact of the compromise was felt almost immediately, and military leaders began to change their minds about the abilities of the WAACs. The women filled positions in 239 categories, becoming clerks, drivers, mechanics, cooks, radio operators,<sup>47</sup> weather observers, laboratory technicians, aircraft warning reporters, weapon repairers, and parachute riggers,<sup>48</sup> just to name a few of the vital jobs they held. (See Appendix C.)

As WWII progressed, military leaders who had once rejected the idea of women in the service began to petition the War Department for additional WAACs: "On more than one occasion, the Army became so desperate for women that its leaders seriously considered requesting Congressional approval to draft them."<sup>49</sup> Instead of resorting to a draft, military officials began to recruit heavily, using posters, radio, newspapers, and even public proclamations to urge women to volunteer.<sup>50</sup> Women were reminded that every WAAC who enlisted freed a man to fight and brought the troops home sooner.<sup>51</sup> (See Appendix D.)

Colonel McCoskrie, Commandant at Fort Des Moines, found that the women were "a good deal more efficient than many all-male military outfits."<sup>52</sup> He added, "There are no better soldiers anywhere on earth."<sup>53</sup> When WAACs went to Europe, they performed so impressively that they were referred to as "Eisenhower's secret weapon."<sup>54</sup> After the war, General Eisenhower said, "Every phase of the record they compiled during the war convinced me of the error of my first reaction."<sup>55</sup> General Douglas MacArthur called WAACs, "my best soldiers."<sup>56</sup>

WAACs were even praised by the enemy. After WWII, Albert Speer, Hitler's weapons production chief, stated, "How wise you were to bring your women into your military.... Had we done that initially, as you did, it could well have affected the whole course of the war."<sup>57</sup>

The impact of the WAAC compromise was so great on the war effort that in 1943 General Marshall decided to remove the auxiliary label, asking Congress to give the women full military status. The auxiliary system had "proved complex and unwieldy, requiring a separate set of WAAC regulations and policies."<sup>58</sup> Facing less conflict this time, the Women's Army Corps bill passed Congress in July 1943, a little over a year after the WAAC had first become operational.<sup>59</sup>

Now, sixty-six years later, it is obvious that the compromise made to create the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps was worth the struggle. More than 150,000 women served in the Army during WWII.<sup>60</sup> In addition to helping preserve democracy, these women overcame conflict, "performed brilliantly, and laid the groundwork on which military women's efforts and achievements still rest today. In fact, advances in many areas in the years between 1960 and today owe much to these women who served during World War II."<sup>61</sup> Currently, 212,000 women serve on active duty in the United States military, comprising 15% of the armed forces. In 1950, only 2% of American forces were female.<sup>62</sup> This increase can be directly tied to the compromise of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, "one of the greatest wartime experiments this nation has ever undertaken."<sup>63</sup>

Overcoming great conflict, Edith Nourse Rogers compromised her vision of a Women's Army Corps to create an auxiliary corps. The impact of this concession still reverberates today. In 1942, Colonel Hobby told her first class of graduating WAACs, "You have taken off silk and put on khaki. You have a debt to democracy and a date with destiny."<sup>64</sup> The women of WAAC accepted that date because it wasn't just their brothers' war, or their husbands' war. It was their war, and they needed to serve in it.

Notes

1. Jeanne M. Holm, ed. In Defense of a Nation: Servicewomen in World War II (Clearwater: Vandamere Press, 1998), i.
2. "Women May Soon Be Enlisting in the U.S. Army," Waterloo Daily Courier, 2 June 1941.
3. Judith A. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps: A Commemoration of World War II Service, (Washington: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1990), 3.
4. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 3.
5. "Catholics v. WAACs," Time, 15 June 1942, 39.
6. Ruth E. Peters, "Why I Don't Join the WACs," The American Mercury, September 1944, 293-297.
7. "Catholics v. WAACs," Time, 15 June 1942, 39.
8. Leisa D. Meyer, Creating GI Jane: Sexuality and Power in the Women's Army Corps During World War II, (New York: Columbia University Press, 1980), 3.
9. Peters, "Why I Don't Join," 293.
10. Meyer, Creating GI Jane, 3.
11. "Women Seek to Enroll for U.S. Defense: Told Their Registration May Be Ordered," New York Times, 10 September 1940.
12. Colonel Frank U. McCoskrie, "I Learned About Women From Them," The American Magazine, November 1943, 17.
13. Holm, In Defense of a Nation, 145.
14. Treadwell, Mattie E, The Women's Army Corps, (Washington: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1953), 17.
15. "Women Want to Join for War but Run into Some Skepticism," Newsweek, 12 January 1942, 23.
16. Peters, "Why I Don't Join the WAC," 294.
17. "Women Seek to Enroll," New York Times, 14.
18. "Wacks and Warns in Prospect for Petticoat Army and Navy," Newsweek, 30 March 1942, 33.
19. "Women Want to Join," Newsweek, 23.
20. Captain Barbara A. Wilson, "World War II Women," Military Women Veterans: Yesterday—Today—Tomorrow, [updated 1996; accessed 18 February 2008], <<http://userpages.aug.com/captbarb/femvets5.html>>.
21. "Women Want to Join," Newsweek, 23.
22. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 3.
23. U.S. Public Law 554: Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. 77th Cong., 2nd sess., 14 May 1942.
24. U.S. Army. Forces in the European Theater. General Board. "Study of the Women's Army Corps in the European Theater of Operations." Army Heritage and Education Center, 1945 [accessed 28 November 2007], <<http://ahecwebdds.carlisle.army.mil/awapps/main.jsp?flag=browse&smd=1&awdid=1>>, 4.
25. Sylvia J. Bugbee, ed. An Officer and a Lady: The World War II Letters of Lt. Col. Betty Bandel, Women's Army Corps, (London: University Press of New England, 2004), xvii.
26. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 4.
27. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2606.
28. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2606.
29. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2607.
30. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2606.

31. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2607.
32. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 4-5.
33. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2606.
34. Cong. Rec. 77th Cong., 1942, 88, pt. 2, 2584.
35. Holm, In Defense of a Nation, 145.
36. Nancy Shea, The WAACs, (New York: Harper & Brother Publishers, 1943), 8.
37. "Wacks and Warns," Newsweek, 33.
38. Committee on Military Affairs, Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, report to accompany H.R. 6293, 77th Cong., 2nd sess., 1942.
39. Committee on Military Affairs, Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, report to accompany H.R. 6293, 77th Cong., 2nd sess., 1942.
40. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 5.
41. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 4-5.
42. Bugbee, An Officer and a Lady, xviii.
43. "Mrs. Hobby's Wacks," Newsweek, 25 May 1942, 32.
44. "Wacks and Warns," Newsweek, 33.
45. "Mrs. Hobby's Wacks," Newsweek, 32.
46. Shea, The WAACs, 7.
47. "33 Reasons for WAACs," Independent, 23 December 1942, "World War II Iowa Press Clippings Digital Collection," Iowa Digital Library, [accessed 30 April 2008], http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/cdm4/item\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/wwii&CISOPTR=2187&REC=6.
48. "The Air Forces Need Thousands of WAAC Members," Gazette, 20 January 1943, "World War II Iowa Press Clippings Digital Collection," Iowa Digital Library, [accessed 30 April 2008], http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/cdm4/item\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/wwii&CISOPTR=2362&REC=17.
49. Treadwell, Women's Army Corps, 246.
50. Treadwell, Women's Army Corps, 239-241.
51. "A Woman's Place is in the WAC," Chief, 19 May 1944, "World War II Iowa Press Clippings Digital Collection," Iowa Digital Library, [accessed 30 April 2008], http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/cdm4/item\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/wwii&CISOPTR=4553&REC=24.
52. McKoskrie, "I Learned About Women," 17.
53. McKoskrie, "I Learned About Women," 17.
54. Ernest O. Hauser, "Wonderful G.I. Janes," Saturday Evening Post, 9 September 1944, 27.
55. Holm, In Defense of a Nation, 145.
56. Amy Nathan, Count on Us, (Washington: National Geographic Society, 2001), 44.
57. Holm, In Defense of a Nation, 145.
58. Bettie J. Morden, The Women's Army Corps, 1945-1978, (Washington: United States Army, 1990), 11.
59. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 18.
60. Bellafaire, The Women's Army Corps, 26.
61. Bugbee, An Officer and a Lady, xxiv.
62. U.S. Census Bureau, [updated 9 August 2007; accessed 18 February 2008], <http://www.census.gov/Press-Release/www/releases/archives/facts\_for\_features\_special\_editions/006232.html>.
63. Octavus Roy Cohen, "She's in the Army Now," Collier's, 5 September 1942, 35.
64. "First Women Soldiers Join Army," Life, 7 September 1942, 37.

Primary Sources

Books

Bugbee, Sylvia J., ed. An Officer and a Lady: The World War II Letters of Lt. Col. Betty Bandel, Women's Army Corps. London: University Press of New England, 2004.

Green, Anne Bosanko. One Woman's War: Letters Home from the Women's Army Corps 1944-1946. St. Paul, MN: Minnesota Historical Society Press, 1989.

Shea, Nancy. The WAACs. New York: Harper & Brother Publishers, 1943.

Treadwell, Mattie E. The Women's Army Corps. Washington: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1953.

Government Documents

Committee on Military Affairs. Establishing a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps for Service in the Army of the United States. Rept. to accompany S. 495. 78th Cong., 1st sess., 1943.

Committee on Military Affairs. Establishing a Women's Army Corps for Service in the Army of the United States. Conf. Rept. to accompany S. 495. 78th Cong., 1st sess. 1943.

Committee on Military Affairs. Women's Army Auxiliary Corps Act Amendments. Rept. to accompany H.R.7539. 77th Cong., 2nd sess. 1942.

Committee on Military Affairs. Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Comments on H.R. 6293. 77th Cong., 1st sess., 1942.

Committee on Military Affairs. Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Rept. to accompany H.R. 6293. 77th Cong., 2nd sess., 1942.

Congressional Record. 77th Cong., 2nd sess., 1942: 2580-2608.

Congressional Record. 1941: A122-A126.

President. Executive Order 9274. "Authorizing an Increase in the Number of Units and Members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps." Federal Register (1942).

---. Executive Order 9163. "Establishing a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps and Providing for its Organization into Units." Federal Register (1942).

U.S. Army. Forces in the European Theater. General Board. "Study of the Women's Army Corps in the European Theater of Operations." Army Heritage and Education Center, 1945 <<http://ahecwebdds.carlisle.army.mil/awapps/main.jsp?flag=browse&smd=1&awdid=1>> (accessed 28 November 2007).

U.S. Public Law 110: Women's Army Corps. 78th Cong., 1st sess. 1 July 1943.

U.S. Public Law 554: Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. 77th Cong., 2nd sess., 14 May 1942.

United States. Department of Labor: Bureau of Labor Statistics. "Wage and Hour Statistics." Monthly Labor Review. Vol. 57. Washington: GPO, 1944. 577-578.

Historic Site

Fort Des Moines Museum. Fort Des Moines, Iowa. 24 July 2007.

Interview

Bailey, Mildred C. "Senior Officers Debriefing Program: Conversations between Brigadier General Mildred C. Bailey and Lieutenant Colonel Rhoda M. Messer," interviewed by Lieutenant Colonel Rhoda M. Messer, Oral History Transcript Vol. II, Army Heritage and Education Center; 2 October 1978 <<http://ahecwebdds.carlisle.army.mil/awapps/main.jsp?flag=browse&smd=1&awdid=2>> (accessed 24 November 2007).

Magazines and Journals

"Army's Most Unusual Rookies are 'Processed' into WAACs." Newsweek, 27 July 1942. 29-30.

"Catholics v. WAACs." Time, 15 June 1942. 39.

Clark, Blake. "Ladies of the Army." Newsweek, May 1943. 85-88.

Clay, Vera. "Newsweek Synthetic WAAC Samples Six-Day Slice of Training Routine." Newsweek, 5 July 1943. 44, 47.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. "'The Lady's a Soldier.'" Collier's, 10 October 1942, 32, 54.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. "She's in the Army Now." Collier's, 5 September 1942, 16, 35.

"First Women Soldiers Join Army." Life, 7 September 1942, 37.

Fleeson, Dorris. "650 WACs Defy the Subs." Woman's Home Companion, October 1943, 20-21.

Hauser, Ernest O. "Wonderful G.I. Janes." Saturday Evening Post, 9 September 1944, 26, 27.

"Major' Hobby's WAACs." Time (25 May 1942). CNN. <<http://www.time.com/magazine/article/9171,766614,00.html>> (accessed 12 January 2008).

McCoskrie, Frank U., Col. "I Learned About Women From Them." The American Magazine, November 1943, 17, 112-114, 116.

"Mrs. Hobby's Wacks." Newsweek, 25 May 1942, 32.

Peters, Ruth E. "Why I Don't Join the WACs." The American Mercury, September 1944, 293-297.

Rogers, Edith Nourse. "A Woman's Army?" Independent Woman, February 1942, 38.

- Smith, Herbert E. "Sisters of the Silk." Independent Woman, March 1945, 70, 86.
- "Soldiers of Uncle Sam." Independent Woman, December 1943, 364.
- "U.S. Women Troop to Enlist in Army's First All-Female Force." Life, 8 June 1942, 26-27.
- "WAAC at Last." Time (18 May 1942). CNN. <<http://www.time.com/9171,849873,00.html>> (accessed 12 January 2008).
- "WAAC Rumors." Newsweek, 21 June 1943, 46.
- "WAAC to WAC." Newsweek, 12 July 1943, 42.
- "WAAC Whispers." Newsweek, 14 June 1943, 34, 35.
- WAC. Advertisement. Minnesota Journal, 24 August 1944, 4.
- "Wacks and Warns in Prospect for Petticoat Army and Navy." Newsweek, 30 March 1942, 33.
- "Wacks' War Bonnets." Newsweek, 1 June 1942, 31.
- "WAC's Daintier Appetite to Save Army $2,700,000." Science News Letter (January 1945): 41.
- "WAC Technicians." Newsweek, 12 March 1945, 80-84.
- "Women Want to Join for War but Run Into Some Skepticism." Newsweek, 12 January 1942, 23.

Memoir

- Sanini, Eleanor V. Memoirs of a WAC. 2004. <<http://www.eleanorsanini.com/#2>> (accessed 28 July 2007).

Newspapers

- "2 WAACs to Ft. Riley." Tribune 4 Sept. 1942. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=1599&REC=1>.
- "5 WAACs Reach England—First to Go Overseas." Tribune 1 Dec. 1942. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=2747&REC=8>.
- "27 WAAC Units in Field." The New York Times, 27 November 1942.
- "33 Reasons for WAACs." Independent 23 Dec. 1942. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=2187&REC=6>.
- "62 Third Officer WAACs Will Get East Coast Duty." Courier 13 Sept. 1942. 30

April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=1663&REC=10>.

"239 Army Jobs Open to WACs." Sentinel 6 Apr. 1944. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=4410&REC=21>.

"7,000,000 Women Workers Seen In War Plants Before Peace Comes." The New York Times, 23 November 1942.

"Ads Used to Recruit WAAC." New York Times, 29 November 1942.

"The Air Forces Need Thousands of WAAC Members." Gazette 20 Jan. 1943. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=2362&REC=17>.

"Air WACs Needed." Journal 26 Apr. 1944. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=4398&REC=25>.

"Approve Plan for Uniformed Women in U.S. Army Service." Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune, 30 December 1941.

"WAAC Force of 150,000 Approved by President." The New York Times, 21 November 1942.

"The WAAC is a Start in the Right Direction..." The Nation (23 May 1942). <<http://www.thenation.com//waac>> (accessed 31 December 2007).

"WAACs to Have Beauty Parlors." New York Times, 21 November 1942.

"A Woman's Place is in the WAC." Chief [Cherokee, Iowa] 19 May 1944. Iowa Digital Library. 2008. University of Iowa. 30 April 2008 <http://digital.lib.uiowa.edu/\_viewer.php?CISOROOT=/&CISOPTR=4553&REC=24>.

"Women May Soon Be Enlisting the U.S. Army." Waterloo Daily Courier, 2 June 1941.

"Women Seek to Enroll for U.S. Defense: Told Their Registration May Be Ordered." The New York Times, 10 September 1940.

Secondary Sources

Books

Cave, Janet P., ed. African American Voices of Triumph: Perseverance. Alexandria, Virginia: Time-Life Books, 1993.

Holm, Jeanne M., ed. In Defense of a Nation: Servicewomen in World War II. Clearwater, Florida: Vandamere Press, 1998.

Meyer, Leisa D. Creating GI Jane: Sexuality and Power in the Women's Army Corps During World War II. New York: Columbia University Press, 1980.

Morden, Bettie J. The Women's Army Corps, 1945-1978. Washington: United States Army, 1990.

Nathan, Amy. Count On Us. Washington: National Geographic Society, 2001.

Nathan, Amy. Yankee Doodle Gals. Washington: National Geographic Society, 2001.

"World War II (1939-1945)." World Book Encyclopedia. 2001 ed. Vol. 1. 739.

Documentary

Free a Man to Fight: Women Soldiers of WWII. Landmark Media Inc., 2000.

Pamphlet

Bellafaire, Judith A. The Women's Army Corps: A Commemoration of World War II Service. Washington: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1990.

Periodicals

Michon, Heather K. "In Tandem with Ken Burns' The War—A Vermont Farmgirl Who Answered the Call to Service." Vermont Woman, October 2007. <<http://www.vermont-woman.com/articles/1007/chris.shtml#top>> (accessed 15 November 2007).

Internet

U.S. Census Bureau. 9 Aug. 2007. <http://www.census.gov/Release////\_for\_features\_special\_editions/.html> (accessed 18 Feb. 2008).

Wilson, Barbara A., Capt. USAF (Ret.). "World War II Women." Military Women Veterans: Yesterday--Today--Tomorrow. 1996. <<http://userpages.aug.com/femvets5.html>> (18 Feb. 2008).

Appendix A

Fort Des Moines

Fort Des Moines, Iowa was the first training center for WAACs. I took the above pictures at the museum at Fort Des Moines. On the left is a poster used after the WAACs became WACs. On the right is a picture taken of women climbing a rope wall. At Fort Des Moines the women studied military first aid and sanitation, military customs and courtesy, map reading, chemical attack defense, and physical training.

In this picture taken at Fort Des Moines Museum, I am standing in front of a wall honoring the graduates of the first WAAC Officer Candidate School. A quote fitting WAAC philosophy is engraved at the bottom of the wall: "Do not follow where the path may lead. Go where there is no path and leave a trail."

Appendix B

Frivolous Treatment

(Source: Rice University) Oveta Culp Hobby is shown here being sworn in as the Director of the WAAC. Notice her “silly hat” that so many newspaper articles described.

The uniforms shown above are displayed at Fort Des Moines Museum. These uniforms led newspaper reporters to call the WAACs “skirted soldiers.”

Appendix C

Jobs Done by WAACs/WACs

WAACs did 239 types of jobs in the Army. The poster on the left was used during WWII to show women what kind of jobs were available to them. The photo on the right shows WAAC Pearl Hargrove, General Dwight. D. Eisenhower's driver in Africa. I took both of these photos at Fort Des Moines Museum.

(Source: Curley) WAC Pvt. Mary Delession was a mechanic at Gowen Field, Idaho during WWII.

Jobs Done by WAACs/WACs

(Source: Sanini) A whole series of posters was created to show women the types of jobs they could hold in the army. These four show WACs working in a chemical laboratory, repairing a radio, checking flight conditions for the army air corps, and taking pictures.

Appendix D

Recruiting Posters

These posters were also used to recruit soldiers for the WAAC/WAC. The posters appealed to the women's sense of patriotism and reminded them that they could help end the war sooner. (Source: Sanini)

The History Teacher

by THE SOCIETY FOR HISTORY EDUCATION

The History Teacher (ISSN: 0018-2745), currently in its 45th Volume and published quarterly, is an informative and inspirational journal with peer-reviewed articles addressing historical and pedagogical issues in primary, secondary, and higher education classrooms. The journal also features reviews of historical monographs, textbooks, films, websites, and other multimedia.

The Society for History Education (SHE), a nonprofit organization based at California State University, Long Beach, publishes The History Teacher. SHE invites individuals to contribute scholarship on the teaching of history, from K-12 to P-16 and beyond, in the spirit of cooperative learning.

Affiliated with the American Historical Association

Annual Subscription Rates

Issued in (1) November, (2) February, (3) May, and (4) August.
Includes PRINT & ELECTRONIC versions, delivered by Post Office and History Cooperative/EBSCO.
Bulk orders for educational programs available.

All rates in U.S. Dollars	United States	Canada/Mexico	All other locations
Individuals	$32	$41	$50
Institutions	$63	$72	$81
Students/Retirees	$22	$31	$31
Lifetime Subscription	$300	$350	$350
Single-Issue orders	$12	$15	$20

ORDER ONLINE: Subscribe now using your credit/debit card or request an invoice/purchase order at our website, www.societyforhistoryeducation.org.

ORDER BY MAIL: Send name and mailing address with check/money order (payable to "Society for History Education, Inc.") or credit/debit card information (Visa, MasterCard, and American Express—indicate card no., exp. date, sec. code, and billing address if applicable).

AHA Offer for K-12 TEACHERS

Save on American Historical Association membership and automatically receive The History Teacher and AHA's monthly Perspectives. Visit the AHA's Subscription page at <www.historians.org/members> for details and ordering.

The History Teacher

by THE SOCIETY FOR HISTORY EDUCATION
California State University, Long Beach
1250 Bellflower Boulevard
Long Beach, CA 90840-1601 • U.S.A.
562-985-2573 • fax: 562-985-5431
info@societyforhistoryeducation.org

www.societyforhistoryeducation.org

The History Teacher Archives and Indexing

History Cooperative at www.historycooperative.org (selected issues), no log-in required

JSTOR at www.jstor.org (3-year "moving wall")

EBSCO at www.ebsco.com (no "moving wall" for EBSCO subscribers—current issue available instantly)

ERIC at www.eric.ed.gov (indexing and abstracts only)

The Society for History Education also offers free article permissions for reproduction in course readers for non-profit educational use.

Complimentary Gift

for new, renewing, & non-subscribers:

"A Life in Public Education: Honoring Gary B. Nash"

A collection of insightful and poignant reflections on the spectacular life and career of historian, author, and educator Gary B. Nash, with contributions from friends, colleagues, and Dr. Nash himself.
E-mail info@societyforhistoryeducation.org.

